Original Sketch.

For "The Columbian."

AN INCIDENT IN MY LIFE.

BY QUIEN SABE.

Soon after the opening of Paraguay River to the commerce of the world, I was sent to Paraguay by my employers for the purpose of purchasing coffee, rice, etc., which far surpassed the productions of Brazil in quality. At that time there was no regular line of steamers playing between the United States and the eastern coast of South America, and I was, therefore, obliged to embark on board of a trading vessel, bound for Rio Janeiro. The passengers were few in number, and nothing unusual occurred until we reacheded Key West, where a lady and gentleman got on board. The latter proved to be a Mr. Holman, from New Orleans, who had just been appointed U. S Consul to Buenos Ayees, and was on his way to commerce his official duties there. He was a pale, emaciated man apparently fifty years of age. But the daughter, as the lady proved to be, drew all attention to herself, causing even the hardy sailors to take off their hats in reverence. It is as impossible to describe her beauty, as it would be to photograph the radiance of the sun. She had a slight, petite figure, though well proportioned and voluptuously developed. Her hair was of that indescribable color between brown and black, which is so beautiful in effect, yet difficult of description. The features were round and regular, —the cheeks alternating; between red and marble,—the lips full and pouting, enclosing teeth which Hebe might have envied. But the real charm was in her eyes. Their color I know not; but in repose they were calm and liquid like the dove's and when excited by passion or pleasure gleamed from under their heavy lashes as lightning darts from a gathering cloud—penetrating—magnetizing all in their sphere.

I occupied the only respectable state room in the vessel, but immediately offered it to Miss Holman She at first refused it, but seeing my earnestness finally took the room, and I felt amply rewarded in receiving one of those sweet smiles she could so well bestow.

Companionship in a vessel, as in an omnibus becomes a necessity; and a few days sufficed to make me thoroughly acquainted with Mr. Holman and his charming daughter, Kate. With a broken voice, the latter told me how she had lost a sainted mother and baby brother a few months before by the Yellow Fever, and that in order to escape from painful memories as well as to restore his broken health, her father had solicicited and obtained his present appointment to Buenos Ayres. The downcast eyes, quivering lips, and above all the gentle pathos of her voice went deep into my heart, causing sympathetic tears to start to eyes which had not known them for years. 'Tis strange how gentle the heart becomes under the influence of love! The stern warrior, accustomed to scenes of carnage and bloodshed, trembles at the sight of a helpless maiden,—the Judge relaxes the official frown, and through its influence permits Mercy to beam from the eyes of Justice,—even the wild beast is tamed by it. There was also that in our situation which predisposed us to love. We saw Nature in her grandest and most illimitable form, and in awe at the sight, crushed back the petty conventionalities of life which too often act as barriers. We were also away from the busy world and its excitements, and in consequence had none of its distractions.

I soon loved Kate, and she knew it.—Not that the word had been mentioned, but intuitively each felt it, and accepted the feeling without protest.

We sailed close to Cuba, Jamaica, and other isles, the perfumes from which were wafted to us by gentle zephyrs which intoxicated the senses, while the green isles and the shadowy mountains in the back ground captivated the imagination.

A few days sailing brought us in sight of the South American coast, and by the shipper's reckoning we were not far from the mouth of the Orinoco. Near midday the wind suddenly fell, and there came a dead calm, not even a ripple disturbing the surface of the watery deep. The fierce, equatorial sun beat down on the vessel with such intensity that it was impossible to keep on the deck, while it was almost suffocating below. At sunset we were all on deck, but still the calm continued; the sun going to rest in a bank of leaden clouds which closed over it as earth does the coffin.

I was seated by Kate, and either the foreboding of danger, or some peculiarity of the scene, caused both to be unusually silent. As night gathered over us, a distant moaning reached our ears. All else was still as death, the sails even hanging listlessly from the spars. The sailors leaned thoughtfully over the railing, apparently watching the phosphoresence of the sea, which now gleamed in the darkness like demons' eyes at a cursed soul. Occasionally a shark would rise to the surface, and then rapidly disappear. Nearer came the moaning sound—thicker gathered the blackness around us—until at last the hurricane with its awful force struck the vessel, shivering the sails and nearly putting the craft on its beam ends. I cannot describe it. The roar was deafening, and each moment the waves swelled higher and higher, threatening to engulp us. At first we tried to reach the cabin, but that was impossible, and nothing remained but to lash ourselves to the mast.

Mr. Holman, at the same instant, came on deck, where all now was in confusion; but while essaying to reach us, slipped and fell on the deck. I ran to assist him, and was in the act of raising him up, when a huge wave broke over the vessel, and I was unresistingly carried into mass of water beyond. One piercing shriek alone reached my ears, then nought was heard but the howling of the hurricane and roar of the now foaming sea. With the instinct of life I tried to keep myself above the surface, my efforts would have been unavailing had not Providence placed in my way a spar which had been wrenched from the ship. I clung to it with the desperation of despair, yet my thoughts were on the loved one left behind; gladly would I have relinquished even life to have known that she was safe. How long I was tossed on the waves I know not, my mental suffering prevented me from thinking of myself, until I felt the spar which I bestrode, grazting the beach; the next wave threw it high on the sands, and I realized the fact that I had escaped a watery grave. I crawled a few paces up the beach, and then nature gave way, and I sank exhausted.

When consciousness returned I found myself lying under the shade of a huge cocoa tree, and to my delight saw Kate Holman bending anxiously over me. Doubt of my own sanity first arose, but a glance towards the still surging ocean, and a certain stiffness in my limbs convinced me that what I saw was real. I soon learned of Kate's escape. She had clung to the vessel until it struck, and then was washed on the beach, which was close by. She had hastened up to a dry place, and there, to her surprise, found me. Her poor father was washed over at the same time I was, and must have drowned immediately. The poor girl's agony was uncontrolable on ascertaining the certainty of his loss. Not a trace of ship or crew was to be seen.

The necessity of action aroused both. Some cocoa-nuts and plantains furnished some sustenance, and believing the Orinoco could not be far off, we determined to push on towards the river, and by embarking on it reach some place of refuge. The deep indentations along the coast prevented us from following that line.

We set off immediately, but our progress was slow. The thick tangled undergrowth covared the surface of the ground, and we were obliged to follow in tracks made by the jaguar and other tropical animals. Chattering monkeyes, screaming parrots, birds of glorious plumage were everywhere around us;—but our desperate situation prevented us from admiring this profusion of animal life. Even had we been so disposed, the growl of a distant jaguar, or sight of the slimy folds of a boa-constrictor were sufficient to strike terror to the stoutest heart. Kate bore up nobly against the fatigue, but finally could proceed no further, and remaining would only involve me in her fate.

"Go," she said, "you have strength sufficient to reach the river; should you escape think kindly of Kate Holman."

I told her of my resolve to stay with her to the last, and bade her be of good cheer as the river could not be far distant. Leaving her for a short time, I proceeded onward for some distance, and soon had the gratification of seeing the gleam of the water through the trees. Vasco de Nunez in discovering the Pacific, or Columbus in first discovering land, could not have felt more joyful emotions than I did at the sight of the turbid flood before me.

I rushed to the margin, but on reaching it my feet sank in the black mire. I tried to extricate them but in vain; each struggle only sank me the faster. At first I was angry,—then fear came over me, and I struggled more violently than before. Vain strife! I only hastened what I would have prevented. Slowly, yet Oh! how rapidly the fetid slime gathered around me,—it had now reached my waist! Thoughts of all my acts from infancy up rushed through my mind with lightning speed. Friends, relatives, all passed in rapid review, and with a sickening feeling I thought of my past aspirations, and of my present position. But all of these thoughts sank into insignificance when I thought of Kate,—alone in the wilderness, with no friend to protect, nor hand to guide, or save me. Again I struggled but my body was now held as in a vice, and my head alone remained above the surface. Inch by inch I sank—all hope was gone, when to add to my misery, from a distant point of the forest rang out a shriek, which I knew to be Kate's,—then all was silent as the grave.

An Automatic Horse.

CURIOUS INVENTION BY A BOSTON MAN—NEW METHOD OF LOCOMOTION.

According to the Boston Traveller, Mr. J. H. Nolan, whose ingenuity and success as an inventor has already secured him a high standing in the mechanical world, has just invented a novel means of locomotion, which is in the form of an automatic or self-propelling horse, the locomotion being produced by the weight of the rider and the weight which is carried. "The "horse" and its appliances are models of mechanical simplicity, and any amount of speed required can be secured, in fact it can be made to go a mile faster than the fastest trotting horse of the day. A small "horse," capable of carrying a man ten or twelve miles per hour can be built at from $15 to $5. The "horse" can carry considerable weight in addition to the rider. The person sits in position as he would upon the live animal, with the feet in stirrups and reins in hands, in which position he can govern the speed and guide the "horse" at will. There was an exhibition made with one of these "horses" recently, in a hall in Boston, and although the room was small and unfavorable for either speed or ease of locomation, a boy weighing sixty pounds propelled the "horse" at from six to seven miles an hour with the utmost ease. The experiment thoroughly established the partical value of the invention.

How the Apostils Died.

[We have published the following more than once heretofore but, religious history cannot be reprinted too often.]

1. Peter was crucified in Rome, and at his own request, with his head downward.
2. Andrew was crucified by being bound to a cross by cords, on which he hung two days exhorting the people till he expired.
3. St. James the Great was beheaded by order of Herod at Jerusalem.
4. James the less was thrown from a high pinnacle, then stoned, and finally killed with a fuller's club.
5. Philip was bound and hanged against a pillar.
6. St. Bartholomew was flayed to death by command of a barbarous king.
7. St. Matthew was killed with a halbert.
8. St. Thomas, while at prayer, was shot with a shower of arrows, and afterwards run through the body with a lance.
9. St. Simon was crucified.
10. Thaddeus, or Judas, was cruelly put to death.
11. St. Matthias—The manner of his death is somewhat doubtful; one says stoned, beheaded, and another says he was crucified.
12. Judas Iscariot fell, and his bowels gushed out.
13. John died a natural death.
14. St. Paul was beheaded by order of Nero.

"So you like your second wife better than the first?" "Yes," he said, enthusiastically; "she always puts enough starch in my shirts to save me the trouble of scratching my back."

A Fall for Life.

The merchant ship Druid, from Bombay for London, lay becalmed off the West coast of Hindostan, between Goa and Mangalore, where the Ghautz mountains were seen towering in savage grandeur, thousands of feet in air, with wild torrents leaping down the rocks, flashing through the dark green shrubbery, and rushing with the din of thunder.

"If the wind doesn't rise ere to-morrow morning, we will have to anchor," said the captain to Robert Winfield, a handsome young naval lieutenant on leave of absence from his frigate, stationed at Bombay.

"I don't want to lay the ship's bones on that coast, nor do I like to get too near it. I have heard bad stories of the natives there; at any rate, I believe that every Hindoo is a thief and a murderer by nature."

Bell Upton, daughter of Major Upton, who was bound home from his India regiment, on sick leave, heard those words, and, shuddering, drew closely to the side of her invalid father.

A quick glance was then exchanged between her and the young lieutenant, whose reassuring look seemed at once to dispel her fear.

Major Upton, noticing the glance, frowning, said to his daughter, "Come, Bell, let us go below."

Winfield had been a suitor of Bell's since she came to visit her father at Bombay some months before. The girl favored him, but but not so the major, who wanted her to choose a wealthier lover.

Bell was beautiful, with a form of unrivaled grace, brown eyes, a clear, pearl white skin, with very little color, and dark, golden hair that fell in rippling masses over a pair of magnificent shoulders.

The lieutenant watched her admiringly until she disappeared in the cabin.

"No harm shall befall her, not while I live!" he thought, as he glanced uneasily towards the coast. "We have arms on board, have we not?" he added aloud to the captain.

"Ay, ay, sir; but it isn't likely we shall be attacked. We are two full leagues from the coast, and, before we are near enough to be boarded, a breeze will spring up I've no doubt."

A few hours later night closed around the ship. The sky was covered with thick clouds which obscured the moon and seemed to betoken that a breeze would come before long.

Meanwhile, the ship having drifted a league nearer the coast, the lieutenant thought the captain very careless not to have more than his one lookout forward posted on so dark a night.

Before 11 o'clock the quarter deck was deserted by all save the officer of the watch, a lazy fellow, who was now stretched on the carpenter's chest half asleep, while the watch forward, as Winfield (who stood leaning over the rail amidships could perceive by the light of a lantern in the fore-rigging, lay reclining on the hatch, some of them) snoring.

Not feeling sleepy, the young lieutenant resolved to go aloft on the mizzentop sail-yard to watch for the first sign of a breeze.

Arrived on the yard, the gloom was so intense that he could not see the water below, although, as he still gazed in that direction—was it reality or only imagination?—he thought he could detect a thin outline of something shooting round the ship's stern!

He was about descending, when the clouds parting over the moon, a flood of silvery light was poured down on ship and water, revealing a spectacle that thrilled the young man with horror—a scene so sudden and unexpected that his very heart seemed to stand still!

While he was aloft, Bell Upton had come out on the quarter deck, and now stood with her back to the rail, about two feet from it, her head bowed as if she was in deep thought, so that her beautiful white neck shone like polished ivory in the clear moonlight.

Unseen, unheard by the young girl, a Hindoo, with a long, lithe body, naked to the waist had clambered the side, from a long canoe containing half a dozen of companions, and had contrived to glide, serpent-like, on the outside of the ship, until he had obtained a position directly behind her, when he had drawn a large dirk, which he was on the point of plunging into the snowy neck of the fair passenger, that she might give no alarm.

The lieutenant's hand clenched the yard like a vice as he beheld the young lady's peril.

He must save her—he would save her, he thought; and yet, how was this to be done.

To give an alarm would only hasten the girl's doom; to desend, no matter how quickly, by means of one of the back stays, would be of no use, as she would perish before he could reach the deck and attempted to stay the deadly hand!

There was no time to lose; in three seconds the dirk would descend, and the girl would be killed at one stroke, so that the murderer's companions, who had already began to discend the vessel's side, could pounce upon the drowsy male occupants of the deck and slaying them, make themselves masters of the ship, almost before a warning could be given.

Like a a lightning flash, the instinct of love, the resolution to save Bell in some manner from the immediate attack sent a sudden thought to the brain of the agonized spectator.

The Hindoo murderer, in his position on the outside of the ship, was under the lieutenant, although about forty feet below him; while the girl standing within two feet of the rail was within easy reach of the native, whose arm and body, as stated, were now drawn back from the bulwarks, to give force to the meditated blow.

The young man, therefore, deemed that it would be an easy matter to reach the Hindoo in the only way it could be done with sufficient rapidity to prevent the accomplishment of his deadly purpose—a way at once novel and desperate, and which would, perhaps, involve his own destruction.

In a word, Lieutenant Winfield, not hesitating to risk life or limb for the woman he loved, resolved to drop down from near the end of the mizzen-topsail-yard upon the Hindoo, forty feet below, and thus dash him from the rail into the sea, perhaps kill him, ere he could deal the fatal blow with his uplifted dirk.

He would utter a shrill cry—a warning to the crew—as he cleaved the air, thus rousing them, perhaps in time to meet the attack of the robbers, and ensure the further safety of Bell and the ship.

The emergency admitted of no delay. The young man, clutching the yard near the end, hung by it a second, to make sure he was in a line with the

TO THE DEMOCRACY OF COLUMBIA COUNTY.

As the time for our general election is near at hand, it becomes our duty to the Democratic party and to our candidates to address you a few words of encouragement and advice. It needs but an active and resolute effort to succeed. Every State around us encourages us to win. The Democracy of Columbia county have never wavered in their devotion, and we now call upon them for renewed exertion.

It is no time to pause, as the time is short. The Committeemen and Vigilance Committees should meet at once, lay out their work, and see that every Democratic vote is polled. Let no man wait or depend upon another. One grand effort and Pennsylvania will be once more in the hands of Democrats who do not belong to Rings, and our State Treasury will be in honest hands, and our State accounts will be honestly audited, so that even our Republican, friends wil rejoice.

DAVID LOWENBERG,
Chairman.

A LAST APPEAL.

We cannot believe that the people are indifferent to their own interests, or that the Democracy are indifferent to the results of next Tuesday's election. We are bound to aid in deciding momentous questions, both as citizens and as Democrats. Indifference, lukewarmness or staying at home is as deliberate assistance to our opponents as voting for their candidates and measures. No man can excuse himself from giving at least one day to his country. We want no shirks and cowards next Tuesday, but expect every Democrat to do his whole duty, and not rest content until he has seen polled every available vote. Our brethren in California and Ohio won by work, and if we fail it is because of apathy in our own ranks. Let this be the oppoatunity for a grand effort,—a full vote, and victory is assured for the present and future. Do not depend on committees and leaders. Let each man do his own duty, and work as if the result depended on his individual efforts. Don't wait until election day. Commence work at once, and keep it up. And, now, altogether, men, for a grand victory next Tuesday.

Presidential Appointments.

The following are among the nominations sent to the Senate by the President: "Theadore Roosevelt, Collector of Customs; Edwin A. Merritt, Surveyor and L. Bradford Prince, Naval Officer for the port of New York. William T. Smith, Collector of Customs, Chicago; Edwin W. Stoughton, New York, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States in Russia; Guilford Wiley Wells, Mississippi, United States Consul General at Shanghia.

The New York appointments are a dig at Senator Conkling, but that is a game two can play at. The nomination of Stoughton is Hayes' civil service method of paying the former for his services before the Electoral Commission.

General N. Bedford Forrest, the great confederate cavalry officer, died at 7:30 Monday evening, at the residence of his brother, Colonel Jesse Forrest.

KELLEY'S ANSWER TO KELLEY.

We admit that the mass of Republicans are honest, and by their votes intend to select the best men and measures for governmental purposes. But we appeal to them consider the acts and declarations of their leaders. One illustration will suffice.

For years Cameron has dominated in this Commonwealth. Able, wealthy, and corrupt, he has been able to buy delegates and representatives, and yet never dared submit his name as a candidate at a popular election. Hayes, with vacillation that is contemptible, instead of choosing a minister to England, delegates that privilege to the Pennsylvania Congressional delegation. That delegation names Simon Cameron,—the prince of frauds, and the anti-type of civil service reform. We do not care to discuss the result of this recommendation, or Hayes action thereon. Nor is it necessary to suggest the reasons which welded that delegation into support. Kelley will answer our purpose. He is the "Nestor of the party"—says the Times,—the father of the House," says another sheet; "the protection leader, and Pennsylvania's champion"—says the thoughtless Press;—and Kelley supports Cameron!

Let us hear Kelley on Cameron! In an old scrap-book we find the following address of Kelley "To the Union men of the Fourth Congressional District." READ IT, REPUBLICANS, IT WILL DO YOU GOOD:

A long and successful career in crime emboldens the guilty. A recent illustration of this law of human nature impels me to violate my life-long rule of conduct and for one to notice a political slanderer. I do not, however, address you for the purpose of repelling his inuendoes or falsehoods. My life has been passed among you, and if its record, familiar to you all, does not repel them, I have lived in vain. My purpose is simply to pierce the mail of ill-gotten gold in which the slanderer has clothed himself, and given you a glimpse of the loathsome object it protects.

The papers of Friday announced that Simon Cameron, of Dauphin county, was serenaded by his friends on the preceding evening at the Girard House in this city, and availed himself of the occasion to villify my colleagues and myself, "the Congressmen of Philadelphia," in a speech to the assemblage.

I was but a youth when I first heard the name of Simon Cameron, and it was as the perpetrator of a great crime. He had been made the agent of the Government to carry a large amount of money, due them, to the Winnebago Indians, and had taken advantage of their ignorance and helplessness to enrich himself. Those of you who had then attained to manhood, may not, after the lapse of so many years, revive the burning indignation with which you regarded the infamous swindler of the poor Indians, will doubtless remember that instead of paying them in specie which the government confided to him for that purpose, he retained it and gave them the notes of the Middletown Bank, of which he was an owner. At their encampment in the remote wilderness these notes were utterly worthless. The Indians could not use them for any purpose there, nor carry them to Middletown for redemption. But what was that to Simon Cameron? Was not their loss his gain, and was he not so much more the richer by every note that failed to come home for redemption, though they did suffer and starve? And those of you who are not old enough to remember all this, now know why this bold, bad man is sometimes spoken of by your seniors as the "Great Winnebago," and sometimes as "Old Kickapoo."

For more than thirty years I have watched the tortuous career of this man and have never seen reason to abandon my first impression of his character. Whether acting with the Democratic, the Know Nothing or the Republican party, for he has in turn disgraced them all; he has never been false to his criminal instincts. He has endeavored to turn them all to profitable account. His ambition is sordid and panders to his avarice, and he measures honors by the perquisites they expose to his grasp. He has no confidence in the people and is aware that they distrust him. His speech of Thursday evening was not characteristic of him, for he is prone to the use of instruments. His habit is to point the stiletto, but to employ another hand to drive it home. Though an active participant in the politics of his county and State for more than half a century, during which long period he has pursued the profits of office, of jobs, of contracts, with vigor and ceaseless assiduity, he has never dared to permit his name to be presented to the people of his county or State as a candidate for an elective office. He crawls to the feet of the appointing power. He cares not who may be king, so that he may "still be Vicar of Bray," and to that end he chaffers with and corrupts weak and needy members of Conventions and the Legislature of both parties.

I need not recite the disgraceful facts attending his several canvasses for the United States Senate. Their nauseous odor lingers in your nostrils to this hour. In the first he BOUGHT the votes of three Democratic members, and in the last bid twenty thousand dollars for the one vote which would have elected him. The last transaction was so flagrant that the Legislature was compelled to take cognizance of it, and if justice be not lame as well as blind, the law and honor of our State will yet be vindicated.

The evil report of his deeds pervades the country as a reproach to our State. Yes, unhappily for Pennsylvania and her great interests the buzzard winged fame of Simon Cameron is national. By months of abject solicitation and corrupt bargaining he procured a mass of letters, certificates and recantations, that imposed him upon President Lincoln as the representative man of the Keystone State. That was an evil hour for Pennsylvania. You all remember how he organized the Navy Agency in this city, and feel the ineffable reproach he thus brought on our Navy Yard and commercial and other business men. * * * * As I have said he begged and bargained for the influence which induced Mr. Lincoln to invite him to a seat in his Cabinet. In less than one year from the day on which Simon Cameron was installed as Secretary of War. Congress, though at that early it had before it but partial evidence of his crimes, indignantly drove him from that high office. Two-thirds of the members of the lower House were friends of the Administration, and would gladly have sustained it as they did its distinguished head.

You can imagine how painful it must have been for them to find themselves constrained by duty to proclaim the fact the first man the head of their party had been induced to appoint as the successor of John B. Floyd had exhibited greater aptitude than he for his worst tricks. But it became inevitable. For this old mar, notwithstanding his boasted and reputed millions, believes that one of his name is never rich enough until he has a little more, and to save their party and the country, the friends of the Administration in the House had to proclaim his infamy and denounce his crimes. Nor was the vote by which they did it a meagre one. His friends and those who would most gladly have averted this digrace from our State could rally but about one-third of the House against the resolutisn of condemnation. The vote was about two to one against him, though I as a Pennsylvania not willing to bear witness against the representative of our State, but two well satisfied of his guilt to vote against the resolution, failed to record my vote.

* * * * *

With grateful regards, yours very truly,
WM. D. KELLEY.

The Auditor General's office has too long been a recording office for corporation rascality. If the people desire to know how their finances are managed, place them in the hands of William P. Schell.

Russian successes still continue, but as yet none of them have been decisive.

Senator Morton is sinking so rapidly that his death is hourly expected.

A WORD TO BUSINESS MEN.

Not only have our leading manufactures and producing interests felt the iron hand of the hard times consequent upon republican legislation, but the evil has been far more distressing to the laborer and mechanic. They cannot hope for aid from the party in power. It is committed to its past record, and clamors for more extravagance in legislation.

It founded the present national bank system, and is bound to protect them in their odious monopoly. On the question of retiring the national bank notes, forty two Democrats voted for it, and only two Democrats, and the entire Republican delegation voted against it. Again, the Democrats have made every effort to remonetize silver, and give us again the "dollar of our daddies.' The law which abolished it as a circulating medium was passed in a congress, both branches of which were largely republican, and was approved by a Republican president. At the last sesion of Congress the democrats passed an act remonetizing silver, but it went to a republican senate, where it was quietly smothered in committee.

The overburdened interests of the country also demand the repeal of the Resumption act. It is leading us to absolute bankruptcy, and was passed in the interest of moneyed capital.

The total vote on this measure in the House was:

For the Resumption act:

Republicans	138
Democrats	None

Against the Resumption act:

Republicans	24
Democrats	74

The act passed the Senate by a vote of 32 years to 14 nays. Every senator voting for the act was a republican, while of the 14 votes in the negative, 11 were democratic and 3 were republican.

Last winter a democratic house of representatives repealed the resumption clause and sent it to the senate where it was smothered along with the act remonetizing silver.

These facts speak louder than words, and show conclusively that the Democrats have endeavored to legislate in the interests of the whole people, and should be sustained. A vote given to side parties is a vote thrown away, and a vote given to the Republican candidates, is an endorsement of their financial measures, of their extravagance, and of the corruption and dishonesty of their leaders.

Vote for R. R. Little, our candidate for District Attorney. He is capable, honest and deserves a heavy vote.

"STATE SECRETS" AGAIN.

Since our article of last week on this subject, Judge Kirkpatrick has overruled the objections of Attorney General Lear to Governor Hartranft and others giving testimony before the Pittsburg Grand Jury. Even a Republican Judge dare not lay down the doctrine that an official is not amenable to the process of a civil court. We understand that the question is to be appealed to the Supreme Court. We have not much faith in that body since it has become the creation of political caucuses, and especially where political questions are involved, but let us hope that it will make no Star Chamber decree.

Since our article on the subject, we are glad to see that such an able journal as the Philadelphia Times has taken the question into consideration. True, it expresses no opinion, but it quotes the following precedent:

In discussing the right of the grand jury of Allegheny county to compel the attendance of Governor Hartranft and the other State officials before them in the Pittsburg riot cases, we have so far seen no allusion to the proceedings in Aaron Burr's trial before the United States Circuit Court at Richmond, in 1807, where substantially the same question was before John Marshall, Chief Justice of the United States, and Cyrus Griffin, Judge of the District of Virginia. Burr thought it necessary for his defense that a certain letter from General Wilkinson to the President of the United States should be produced, and, upon affidavit filed, moved the Court for a subpœna duces tecum to Thomas Jefferson, the President. After an argument, which lasted nearly three days, the Chief Justice, on the 13th of June, 1807, delivered his opinion, in which he sustained the right of the defendant (Burr) to have the subpœna issued upon proper cause shown and with the leave of the Court. We make a single extract from the opinion, where Chief Justice Marshall likened the first Magistrate of the Union "to the first Magistrate of a State—at any rate, under the former confederation—and it is not known ever to have been doubted but that the Chief Magistrate of a State might be served with a subpœna ad testificandum." Mr Jefferson, in a letter dated June 17, 1807, to Mr. Hay, the District Attorney for the District, objected to a personal attendance on the ground of inconvenience, but offered to be examined by a commission. Subsequently the letter wanted by Mr. Burr was produced and the subpœna was never issued. The opinion of Chief Justice Marshall is a thorough examination of the whole question on principal and undoubtedly will be the weighty authority in the determination of the question of Governor Hartranft's attendance at Pittsburg, soon to be argued before our Supreme Court.

Wilson Ager's Complaint.

Wilson Ager is seeking a decree of absolute divorce from his wife Emma, whom he took for his second wife in May, 1864. They separated in 1874, and Ager asserts that since then she has lived in Harlem and other places in this city with F. R. Fennessy as his mistress. The case was before Judge Donohue yesterday, on a motion by Mrs. Ager for temporary alimony and counsel fee. She denies any improper intimacy on her part with Fennessy or anybody else, and says her husband is worth over $50,000, besides owning valuable patents. In opposition, Ager asserts that in 1873 he lost all his property and was obliged to sell his patent for a small sum. Elisha C. Ager, son of the plaintiff by his first wife, swears that his stepmother is a woman much addicted to the use of spirituous liquors and that he has seen her actually drunk a dozen times. He also says she is very extravagant in her mode of dressing, so that her expenses were largely in excess of the means of her husband. In October, 1873, at the Commercial Hotel, Chicago, she was so drunk that she could not go to breakfast the next morning, and Mr. Ager would then have left her but for his (the son's) intercession. Judge Donohue referred the matter to Hugh McDonald to fix the amount of alimony.—N. Y. World.

Repealing the Resumption Act.

The banking and currency committee at their meeting on Wednesday, agreed to report a bill to repeal the third section of the resumption act by a vote of six to five. The bill was subsequently reported in the house. The committee at their next meeting will take up the subject of the silver dollar, and report a bill in favor of unlimited remonitization of that coin.

Hartranft has concluded to disobey the subpœnas served on him. He had better court martial that Grand Jury.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN SPEAKS.

Gentlemen of the Young Men's Democratic Club.—I thank you for your kindly greeting My summer excursion, now just closed, was undertaken for the purpose of having a period of physical activity in the open air, in a moderate climate, and amid scenes interesting by their associations with our literature, with our jurisprudence and with the origin and growth of representative institutions. It has repaired as much as three months could the waste of six years consecrated to an effort for governmental reform in the city, state and nation. I do not forget that in 1871 you joined in the work, and have ever since been wanting to do it. I am glad here to-night to mingle my congratulation with yours on what has been done, on the good auguries for the future, and above all, on the resolute purpose of the young men of our country that the republic shall be completely restored and reestablished according to its original ideas. (Applause.)

The contrast which strikes the American eye between the British isles and our own country in the supply of food and especially cereals ought to be the basis of profitable exchanges and inestimable benefactions. The wants of our British cousins—already enormous—will rapidly increase. They grow not only with population, but by an incessant diversion of labor toward the most profitable employments. Our means of supply are boundless. We have immense areas of fertile soils, cheap, peculiary fitted for the use of agricultural machinery and connected with the centres of foreign commerce by great rivers, by vast inland seas and by 75,000 miles of railway. We have a sun in our heavens which in the season of agricultural growth pours down daily floods of light and warmth, making the earth prolific, giving abundance and variety of fruits, assuring the wheat crop, yielding cotton in its zone and ripening corn everywhere, even to the verge of the farthest north. I predict a great increase in the consumption of our corn by Great Britain over the 60,000,000 bushels which it reached last year. It is the most natural and spontaneous of our cereal products. Our present crop ought to be 1,500,000 bushels, against 300,000,000 bushels of wheat. It is but little inferior to wheat in nutritive power. It costs less than one-half on the farm. It can be cooked, by those who consent to learn how, into many delicious forms of human food. Why should not the British workmen have cheaper food? Why should not our farmers have a great market? Why should not our carriers have transportation?

Let us remember that commercial exchange must have some element of mutuality. Whoever obstructs the means of payment obstructs also the facilities of sale. We must relax our barbarous revenue system so as not unnecessarily to retard the natural processes of trade. We must no longer legislate against the wants of humanity and the beneficence of God (Applause.)

The election now impending involves the choice of the state officers who compose the administrative boards. Governor Robinson's administration has been characterized by incorruptible integrity, by wisdom and ability, and by unswerving fidelity to the reforms that have reduced the state taxes one-half; that are rapidly extinguishing the state debt; that have retrenched two and a half millions a year of the expenditures upon public works and have purified our great official trusts. (Applause.) He needs and has a right to have the cordial co-operation of those officers, which, in the government of the United States and other systems, form the cabinet of the chief executive. In my judgment the gentlemen in nomination will co-operate in the reform policy which I had the honor to inaugurate, and which Governor Robinson is consummating. I think that their election and the changes that will take place from the constitutional amendments adopted in 1876, will give him a more united support in the canal board than I was able to receive during my administration.

A voice, "your's right there." (Cheers.) I have the more satisfaction in avowing this conviction because I believe that any nominations that did not promise such co-operation would be disowned by the democratic masses. (Applause.)

The election, although for state officers, has relations to national politics, to which I know you will expect me to allude. (A voice, "Of course go on.") The condemnation by the people of the greatest political crime in our history, by which the result of the presidential election of 1876 was set aside and reversed, is general and overwhelming. (A voice—"We're sick of it." Applause.) Her sister states might afford to have the voice of New York frittered away or its expression deferred. It could not alter the universal judgment of the civilized world; it could not avert the moral retribution that is impending. But New York herself cannot afford to have her voice unheard.

A voice—"You were robbed there."

Mr. Tilden—I did not get robbed—the people got robbed. I had on the one hand a laborious service in which health and even life itself might be periled; or, on the other hand, I had a period of relaxation. But to the people it was a robbery of the dearest rights of an American citizen. (Great applause.)

The Declaration of independence, the bill of rights and the state constitutions all contain assertions of the right of the people to govern themselves and to change their rulers at will. These declarations had ceased to have any meaning to the American mind. They seemed to be truisms which there was nobody to dispute. The contests known to us were contests between different portions of our people.

To comprehend the significance of these declarations it is necessary to carry ourselves back to the examples of human experience in view of which our ancestors acted. They had seen the government machine and a small government class, sometimes with the aid of the army, able to rule arbitrarily over millions of unorganized, isolated atoms of human society. In forming the government of United States they endeavored to take every precaution against the recurrence of such evils in this country. They kept down the standing army to a nominal amount. (Cheers.) They intended to limit the functions of the federal government so as to prevent the growth, to dangerous dimensions, of an office-holding class and of corrupt influences. They preserved the state government as a counterpoise to act as centres of opinion and as an organized means of resistance to revolutionary usurpation by the federal government. (Applause.) Jefferson the leader of liberal opinion, in his first inaugural, recognized this theory. Hamilton, the representative of the extreme conservative sentiment, in the Federalist, expounded it with elaborate arguments Madison, the father of the constitution, enforced these conclusions.

The increase of power in the federal government during the last twenty years, the creation of a vast office holding class, with its numerous dependents, and the growth of the means of corrupt influences have well nigh destroyed the balance of our complex system. It was my judgment in 1876 that public opinion, demanding a change of administration, needed to embrace two-thirds of the people at the beginning of the canvass, in order to cast a majority of votes at the election. (Cheers.)

If this tendency is not arrested its inevitable result will be the practical destruction of our system. Let the federal government grasp power over the great corporations of our country and acquire the means of addressing their interests and their fears; let it take jurisdiction of riots which it is the duty of the State to suppress; let it find pretexts for increasing the army, and soon those in possession of the government will have a power with which no opposition can successfully compete. (A Voice—"Next time I will bet on you.") The experience of France under the Third Napoleon shows that, with elective forms and universal suffrage, despotism can be established and maintained.

In the canvas of 1876 the federal government embarked in the contest with unscrupulous activity. A member of the cabinet was the head of a partisan committee. Agents stood at the doors of the pay offices to exact contributions from official subordinates. (A voice, "You are right.") The whole office-holding class were made to exhaust their power. Even the army, for the first time, to the disgust of the soldiers and many of the officers, was moved about the country as an electioneering instrument. All this was done under the eye of the beneficiary of it, who was making the air vocal with professions of civil service reform, to be begun after he had himself exhausted all the immoral advantages of civil service abuses.

Public opinion in some states was overborne by corrupt influences and by fraud. But so strong was the desire for reform that the democratic candidates received 4,300,000 suffrages. This was a majority of the popular vote of about 300,000 and of 1,250,000 of the white citizens. It was a vote 700,000 larger than General Grant received in 1872, and 1,300,000 larger than he received in 1868. (Tremendous cheering.)

The step from an extreme degree of corrupt abuses in the elections to a subversion of the elective system itself was natural. No sooner was the election over than the whole power of the office-holding class, led by a cabinet minister was exerted to procure, and did procure, from the state canvassers of two states illegal and fraudulent certificates, which were made a pretext for a false count of the electoral votes. To enable these officers to exercise the immoral courage necessary to the parts assigned to them, and to relieve them from the timidity which God has implanted in the human bosom as a limit to criminal audacity, detachments of the army were sent to afford them shelter.

The expedients by which the votes of the electors chosen by the people of these two states were rejected and the votes of the electors having the illegal and fraudulent certificates were omitted, and the menace of usurpation by the president of the senate of dictatorial power over all the questions in controversy, and the menace of the inforcement of his pretended authority by the army and navy, the terrorism of the business classes and the kindred measures by which the false count was consummated are known." ("Yes, yes")

The result is the establishment of a precedent destructive of our whole elective system. The temptation of those in possession of the government to perpetuate their own power by similar methods will always exist, and if the example be sanctioned by success, the succession of government in this country will come to be determined in fraud or force, as it has led to the general adoption of the hereditary system in order to avoid confusion and civil war. (Applause.)

The magnitude of a political crime must be measured by its natural and necessary consequences. Our great republic has been the only example in the world of a regular and orderly transfer of governmental sucession by the elective system. To destroy the habit of traditionary respect for the will of the people, as declared through the electoral forms, and to exhibit our institutions as a failure is the greatest possible wrong to our own country It is also a heavy blow to the hopes of patriots struggling to establish self-government in other countries It is a greater crime against mankind than the usurpation of December 2, 1851, depicted by the illustrious pen of Victor Hugo. The American people will not condone it under any pretext or for any purpose. (A voice—"Never! Never!") (Applause.)

Young men, in the order of nature we who have guarded the sacred traditions of our free government will soon leave that work to you. Within the life of most who hear me our republic will embrace a hundred millions of people. Whether its institutions shall be preserved in substance and in spirit, as well as in barren forms, and will continue to be a blessing to the toiling millions here and good example to mankind, now everywhere seeking a larger share in the management of their own affairs, will depend on you. (A voice—"We'll 'tend to it.")

I avail myself of the occasion to thank you and to thank all in our state and country who have accorded to me their support, not personal to myself, but for the cause I have represented, and which has embraced the largest and holiest interests of humanity. (Applause.) Fellow citizens I thank you for your kind attention. I am glad to meet you I am glad to meet the club, and I am glad to meet all united with you, and I bid you a cordial and affectionate good-night. (Great cheering, during which Governor Tilden reentered the house.]

Give Isaiah Yeager for Coroner, and Samuel Neyhard for Surveyor, a rousing vote. Better men could not be selected in the County.

Judge Strong's Letter.

The following remarkable letter addressed by Justice Strong to the Hon. George W. Jones of Tennessee was sent by the latter to the New York Sun in which it appeared on Tuesday:

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26, 1877.—The Hon. George W. Jones—MY DEAR SIR: I was a Democrat when you and I were together in Congress. I am a Democrat now. I hold to all the opinions the states rights democrats have always held, and which the acknowledged leaders of the party have avowed up to the present winter—never more clearly than in 1873 to 1875. "I do not believe that Congress has any constitutional right to inquire into state elections for state electors.

"Congress has of late years interfered quite too much with the States. The Electoral Commission has no more power than Congress has, and I think it would be a most dangerous usurpation were it to do what the States alone have a right to do, even to cure what I fear was a great wrong of the Louisiana returning board.

"I cannot doubt that such will be your opinion when you reflect to what the assertion of such a power would lead. It would place the rights of the States, respecting the choice of electors, at the mercy of the Federal government, and be the greatest stride toward centralization.

"Better suffer a present evil than open such a door, better than abandon all the time-honored principles of the Democratic party. I am yours, very respectfully,

"W. STRONG."

It may be gratifying to witness Judge Strong paying homage to "the time-honored principles of the Democratic party" which he so deeply betrayed when he was put on the supreme bench to aid in reversing its solemn decision on the legal tender act. But he will not be permitted again to pervert those time-honored principles to justify his share in the gigantic crime by which the people were defrauded of their choice of a President. He confesses "the great wrong of the Louisiana Returning Board," and by his decision in the electoral commission he gave that great wrong his sanction though the commission was formed for the purpose of ascertaining who was chosen President and Vice President of the United States. His pretext for suffering the perpetration of the great fraud on the ballot is that its cure would have been "the greatest stride towards centrilization." Judge Strong was willing to connive at the present and potential fraud which struck down the ballot and deprived a majority of forty million people of their rights in his pretended fear of making it a precedent for some danger in the distant future A defrauded people do not share his apprehensions.

Judge Strong tells his old Democratic friend of Tennessee that it would have been a dangerous usurpation of congress to cure the great wrong of the returning board, and that the commission had no more power than Congress. But having concluded that the commission had no power to decide between the two sets of certificates from Louisiana and Florida he decided in favor of the certificates that covered the returning board frauds. He asserted that Congress and the commission could not go behind the certificate of the governor of a state in two cases of Louisiana and Florida, and he went behind the governor's certificate in the electoral vote of Oregon. Where then was his regard for the time honored principles of the democratic party and his dread of the danger of centralization? It is evident that Judge Strong's letter was never intended for the eyes of the public.—Patriot.

An Ex-Congressman's Suicide.

A special dispatch announces that on Wednesday the 24th ult., Hon. Sobieski Boss, ex-member of Congress, shot himself through the heart in the barn near his dwelling at Coudersport, Potter county. When found, shortly thereafter he was dead. Judge Ross has been in ill health and very despondent for some months His tragic death has caused a deep gloom over the community in which he lived.

[Sobieski Ross was a resident of Coudersport, where he was born May 16, 1828. With the exception of a single year at school in New Hampshire he had always resided in his native town. His education was limited to the common school and a couple of years at an academy He was variously employed as a surveyor, land agent and farmer, but for a number of years past he had been engaged in settling a large body of land in several of the northern counties of Pennsylvania. In 1851 Mr. Ross was appointed Associate Judge for Potter county by Governor Johnson In 1872 Judge Ross was elected to the Forty-third Congress, as a Dopublican, receiving 17,041 votes against 14,627 votes for H. Sherwood, Democrat. In 1874 he was re-elected over Henry W. Early, the district having been changed, by a vote of 10,660 to 9,331. Until the organization of the Republican party Judge Ross acted with the Whigs, but had since been a thorough Republican. His friends considered him a successful business man, and he had devoted considerable time in late years to secure a railroad to his native place.]

OYSTERS.—Thirty thousand people are engaged in the oyster trade of Baltimore, and more than seven hundred schooners and pongies form its Chesapeak oyster fleet. Some experts will open twenty-five gallons of oysters a day, earning twenty five cents per gallon; men, women, girls and boys (mostly of German parentage) are engaged in the packing rooms, where the measuring, washing, assorting and canning go on incessantly. In the raw business the oysters are first packed in airtight cans, which are in turn packed in sawdust and ice for shipment—fifteen million cans of raw being shipped per season The Tangier and Pocomoke Sounds' oysters are the favorite brands. The State licenses were issued on September 28, and on October 1. The season was opened with enlarged prospects owing to European contracts.

A large temperance meeting was held in Berwick on Tuesday night and was addressed by C. B. Brockway.

CHURCH DEDICATION.—The Union Church near Mainville, known as Fisher's Church, will be dedicated on Sunday, November 11th A. D. 1877.

One of our most estimable citizens may be thankful for the introduction of Dr. Bulls Cough Syrup, for its timely use has saved his life.

And now the Montour American has taken to cribbing editorials. Still, its readers should not complain as they are preferable to the usual original matter furnished them.

On last Saturday evening the Buck Horn Band paid our town a visit, and serenaded a number of citizens. Come again, gentlemen We are always glad to hear your music, and shake your hands.

On Tuesday we have an important election. Those who like the "times," will either stay at home, or vote the Republican ticket. Those who favor economy and reform will vote for the Democratic candidates.

The voice of reform is heard through the land and speaks of the "good time coming." So too the spirit of reform is working in the nurseries of the land to banish those dangerous Opium and Morphia preparations, and establish useful and harmless remedies, of which Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup is acknowledged as the very best for all the disorders of Babyhood and early Childhood. Sold everywhere at 25 cents a bottle.

SHERIFF WORK.

Sheriff Mahaffey has been doing some heavy work this week thus far. On Monday he had two sales on the outer edge of the county, near Columbia county, in Franklin township near Jordan; also one at Montgomery and one in Nippenose valley. At one of the sales he had to drive some of the cattle over the line from Columbia into Lycoming county, before he could sell them. This sale drew a large attendance.—Gazette & Bulletin.

ARRESTED.—Louis E Conover, of Beach Haven was arrested at that place Wednesday, by Constable Samuel Emery of this city, upon a warrant issued by the Pottsville Mutual Fire Insurance Company, for whom Conover has been acting as agent, charging him with embezzlement to the amount of $1,356. He was taken before Squire Brockway, of Beach Haven, and gave bail in the sum of $2,000, his mother becoming his surety.—Record of the Times.

Many of our citizens have been honored with offices of trust and profit in the past, and many more are looking for favors in the future. To such we would say that they owe it to themselves and to the party to work night and day for the success of our ticket. The people will remember those who are active when others are in the field. A selfish politician deserves nothing at the hands of the people. We shall watch the returns from certain townships with much interest.

The colored men of Pottsville, as well as elsewhere, have resolved to quit the Republican ranks, where they are only wanted about election time. They put it this way:

Resolved, That we sever our connection with the Republican party, with which we have heretofore been identified, and we hereby proclaim ourselves, as colored citizens of Pottsville, free and independent voters, to exercise the right of franchise as our consciences dictate.

The Danville Iron works are to be removed to Pueblo, Colorado, $12,000 in cash and $20,000 in real estate having been given as an inducement. Our friends S. P. Wolverton, of Sunbury, and Mr. Faux of Danville we learn are at the head of the enterprise.

Since our last issue we regret to learn that Col. C. K. Hughes, John Altstatt, Geo. Biddleman and Mrs. Nicholls have each lost a child by diptheria. Mrs. Nicholls has thus been bereft of three children in a short time. The bereaved friends have the sympathy of the community.

A sociable will be held in the basement of the M. E. Church on next. Saturday evening, the 3d inst., at which Oysters, Ice Cream, Cakes, &c., &c., will be offered. Let there be a general attendance.

By orker of
LADIES' MITE SOCIETY.

Not unfrequently the changes from heat to cold are very sudden and trying to the system, but by the prompt use of Dr. Hass' Expectorant, all danger from this source may be avoided. 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

Now that England is to have an Egyptian obelisk, and Cleopatra's Needle is to be sent to New York, cannot some enterprising Bloomsberger secure one of the Khedive's Pyramids? Mr. Walter would probably donate a lot, or a corner could rest on our useless Park.

Our maiden aunt and "the rest of the family" have arrived, afflicting with terrible coughs and colds. We immediately supplied each one with a bottle of Dr. Coxe's Wild Cherry and Seneka. They are better.

Any one approaching Rohrsburg will be impressed with the imposing appearance of the new building put up by Messrs. Black and occupied on first floor as their fine cabinet furniture ware room, and in the upper stories with shop, town-hall and lodge.

WORMS IN FLOWER POTS.—Many flower lovers are puzzled how to get rid of the detestable worms that will infest the earth in their flower pots. The following is recommended to destroy the pests: "Put one ounce of ammonia into one gallon of warm water, and water the plants with it once a week. They will be free from these worms and be beautiful and green. To kill the little bugs that get on the oleander, take a piece of lime the size of a hen's egg, and dissolve it in about two quarts of water, and wash the stalk and branches of the tree."

It is worth while to remark that the only school director who attended the teachers' examination at Town Hill recently, was Mrs. Bogert, of New Columbus borough. This surely recommends to the selection of ladies for this position.—Echo.

We are surprised that more ladies are not elected school directors. As a rule they are as well qualified as the men, and in many respects better. Their visitations would be more frequent, and their practical experience would suggest many ideas that would escape a man. By all means let us elect a number of ladies as Directors.

We last week announced the death of Hiram R. McHenry, whose arm had been amputated at the shoulder, some months since. It is proper to add: that his sudden death is not believed to have resulted directly or indirectly, from the amputation. The shoulder healed up rapidly, and, at the time of his death, there was not the slightest inflammation or other symptom of disease in the wound. The death seems to have occurred from a rheumatic affection, which suddenly seated itself upon the heart, and caused the death almost instantly after it became located there.

FATAL RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—Mr. David Houghton, an old man of eighty-five years of age, residing near Johnson's mill, in Point township, was struck by the 9 a. m. passenger train on Lackawanna and Bloomsburg railroad last Friday and instantly killed. Mr. H. was engaged in gathering coal along the track at the same time the accident happened. He was wheeling the coal in a wheel-barrow over a plank he had placed across the track. Upon the approach of the train he removed the plank, but unfortunately did not himself get out of the way of the train. He was struck by the engine and dragged a considerable distance, and was killed instantly. His remains were enterred in the Northumberland cemetery on Saturday.—Sunbury Gazette.

Philadelphia is essentially a Republican City and has a first class Ring administration. One result we quote from the Times.

On Monday next Sheriff Wright will sell some fifteen hundred properties of unfortunate citizens of Philadelphia, who have gone down in the general prostration of business and shrinkage of values. It will be the largest sale of real estate, in point of numbers, ever made by any Sheriff in Pennsylvania, and its lesson is indeed a sad one in a city where taxes reach a moderate rent and municipal debt is growing with each year. And yet the placemen who have made property almost valueless in Philadelphia by ther profligacy, and bankrupted thousands of owners of small homes, are devising ways by polluting the ballot boxes at the next election.

OBITUARY.—It is our painful duty to record the sudden death of Mrs. Kate R. Wilson, wife of Mr. Ogden Wilson and daughter of the late Rev. A. R. Rutan, of the Christian church. It occurred on the 20th of last month. The deceased resided near Jonestown, this county, and was at the time of her death a worthy member of the M. E. Church at "Creveling's Cross Roads," where she "professed a good profession before many witnesses." She was for several years prior to her marriage a very successful teacher in the public schools of Luzerne county.

Her illness was brief. She died in the 30th year of her age, and leaves two bright little girls with the sorrow stricken husband to lament her departure. J. F. B.

WHEREAS; we bow humbly to the divine will, believing that all his judgments are just, and his ways merciful. Believing also that our brother died in hope of a blessed immortality: therefore

Resolved, that in the death of brother McHenry this Grange has lost a worthy member, his family an affectionate husband and father, and the community an upright citizen and an honest man.

Resolved, that his family have our earnest sympathy in their bereavement, and we commend them to him, who does not afflict willingly, but giveth grace to sustain us in all our sorrows.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be tendered to the family and published in the county papers.

Send in the news promptly on Tuesday night. We will give you news from this and other States in return.

On Sunday evening an accident occurred a short distance below Espy, which resulted in the killing of a horse. As Mr. Strauss, of Centre, was driving along at a customary gait he saw two buggies approaching him driving at a frightful rate. He tried to turn out but the driver of the approaching buggy pulled in the same direction and collided with him. The young man in charge of the buggy by the name of Faus, had given the reins to the young lady he had with him and she evidently knew nothing about driving. One of the shafts of Strauss' buggy ran into the breast of the Faus horse and broke off. It was pulled out and the horse staggered back and fell dead. This was certainly a lesson for young Faus and the other young man, Staley, who was with him It is only through the mercy of Mr. Strauss that they have escaped prosecution for such reckless driving. We would suggest to young men hereafter to drive themselves and not seek to gratify the egotism of their partners by entrusting spirited annimals to feminine control.—Republican.

PERSONAL.—Ex-Judge Mayberry Hughes, of Catawissa, paid us a visit last week. The Judge looks as gay and handsome as of yore and was warmly greeted by his many friends here. During the evening he was waited upon at his hotel by Dusch's Silver Cornet Band, who tendered him a serenade. Of course the compliment was duly appreciated and the band was made to feel so.

We clip the above from the Ashland Advocate, and give it credit for the item. As Ashland is practically a corner of Columbia county, it always gives us pleasure to record items of local adventures occurring there, especially the reception extended to our distinguished fellow citizens, the details of which, as a rule, they are too modest to give us. Lack of space prevents us from giving the whole of Judge Hughes' speech. To the "Greenbackers" he was in favor of "greenbacks." He delighted the advocates of the remonetization of silver by declaring in favor of "the dollar of the daddies." To the "bloated bond-holders" he said that he did not own one share of stock in the Catawissa Deposit Bank. He declined to give his opinion on the Turco-Russian war until Simon Cameron became Minister to England. We will give the "interview" of the other Catawissa "Ex Judge" when—we receive it.

THE TREATMENT OF DIPTHERIA.

This terrible scourge has obtained such a foothold in our midst, that every precaution should be used to check. The disease is not only formidable because it is wide spread, but because science knows little how to deal with it As a duty to our readers we give the following communication from Dr. Gardner, one of our foremost physicians and surgeons. We trust it may prove useful in saving many lives:

As there are conflicting opinions regarding the contageousness of diptheria which is now prevailing to a considerable extent in our town, it may not be inappropriate to give your readers the following information which is endorsed by leading physicions and published by the Board of Health of New York. Diptheria is a contageous and infectious disorder occurring, also endemically and epidemically.

PRECAUTION.

Cleanliness in and around the dwelling, and pure air in living and sleeping rooms are of the utmost importance when any contageous disease is prevailing, as cleanliness tends to prevent and mitigate it. Every kind and source of filth in and around the house should be thoroughly removed: cellars and foul areas should be cleansed and disinfected; drains put in repair; dirty walls and ceilings should be lime-washed and every occupied room should be thoroughly ventilated. Apartments which have been occupied with persons sick of diptheria should be cleansed with disinfectants; carpets, and clothing, upholstered furniture &c., should be exposed to fresh air and sun light. All articles which may be boiled or subjected to high degree of heat should be thus disinfected, rooms should be exposed to fresh currents of air for at least one week before reoccupation.

"When Diptheria is prevailing no child should be allowed to kiss strange children nor those suffering from sore throat (the disgusting custom of compelling children to kiss every visitor is a well contrived method of propogating other grave diseases than diptheria,) nor should the child sleep with nor be confined to rooms occupied by, or use articles as toys &c, belonging to children having sore throats, croup, or catarrah. If the weather is cold the child should be warmly clad with flannel. Croup occurring when diptheria prevails usually assumes a diptheretic character." When diptheria is in the house or in the family. The well children should be scrupulously kept apart from the sick, and every possible source of infection through the air by personal contact with the sick, and by articles used about them or in their rooms should be rigidly guarded. Every attack of sore throat, cough, and catarrh should be at once attended to; the feeble should have invigorating food and proper out door exercise.

SICK CHILDREN.

The sick should be rigidly isolated in well aired sun lighted rooms with free ventilation, which is better obtained by depressing the upper window sash. All discharges from the mouth or nose should be received into vessels containing desinfection, or be immediately burned.

If a patient cannot gargle, take a live coal, put it on a shovel, and sprinkle a spoonful or two of flour of brimstone upon it at a time; let the sufferer inhale it, holding the head over it, and the fungus will die. If plentifully used, the whole room may be filled almost to suffocation; the patient can walk about in it, inhaling the fume with the doors and windows shut. The mode of fumigating a room with sulphur has often cured most violent attacks of cold in the head, chest, etc, at any time and is recommended in cases of consumption and asthma.

Care of Fowls.

There is probably no other interest on the farm so generally neglected as that of poultry. It is a common phrase among farmers that "chickens can scratch for a living," and this comprises about all the care they receive. Summer or winter, rain or shine, cold or warm, in all kinds of weather they are left to take care of themselves—gaining a precarious living, roosting on fences, trees, the mangers and racks of horse stables. They are merely suffered as a nuisance, rather than cared for as they should be. In our cold winter months, for want of proper shelter, combs and wattles are frozen and feet are often lost from the effects of the extreme cold. If we were to accuse our farmer friends of cruelty they would open their eyes in innocent surprise. But is it not downright cruelty to let your fowls go through the long cold winters without proper care or shelter? How much do the poor birds suffer before they lose combs, wattles and feet? The trouble is not that any are intentionally guilty of cruelty. But the old "scratch for themselves" adage has been so long and persistently taught that men believe in it and act accordingly. The care of the fowls is a thing never thought of, and the idea of providing comfortable quarters for them is unheard of. Then we hear the complaint "we get no eggs." "Here are one hundred hens eating more than they are worth, and we do not get eggs enough to supply the table." This may be all true, but thinks for a moment of the care you have given them. They are simply paying you in your own coin, and even then are no doubt doing better by far than you have done by them. Perhaps fowls in the farm yard suffer more for pure water in the winter than from any other cause. In the summer they usually get plenty and do well enough, but in our cold climate, when springs and brooks are frozen over, when tanks and swill pails are no longer available, then their daily allowance is entirely cut off, and often for weeks, and even months, they do not get a drop of water. They can snow when it is to be had, and they could do nothing worse, for this has the very singular property of making them poor, and they should never be allowed to eat it. If they are supplied with water they will not eat snow. This treatment, with very little variation and with few exceptions is the rule among farmers. The result is that millions of fowls die annually of that scourge of poultry—the cholera. Years ago the cholera was dreaded as a most fearful plague among the human family. Towns and cities were devasted by its ravages; but of late years, by cleaning cess pools of filth in the cities, and by other proper measures, it has lost its terrors.

Here lies the great remedy for chicken cholera—cleanliness and the proper care. This will do more to rid the country of this plague than all the patent nostrums in existence. With but a very little outlay of money and time you can build a good, comfortable house for your fowls. Let it face the south, with windows to give light and warmth when the sun shines. Spend an hour each day in feeding, watering, and caring for your fowls. Remove all the droppings every day or two, preserving them carefully in a heap; your American guano will repay you for all the care and feed you give your fowls. Keep your house clean and well ventilated and you will have a plentiful supply of eggs in winter as well as in summer and the time that you spend with your fowls will repay you a larger percent. than any time you spend on the farm.

Storing Potatoes.

Every method has been tried by farmers to store and preserve their potatoes through the winter and we may say until potatoes came again. It is the most valuable of all vegetables though here and there we find a person and a writer who undertakes to tell us of its unwholesomeness. It is universally consumed in all civilized countries, as where it cannot be grown it is imported, which can be done long distances without injury, when ventillation is attended to.

In storing potatoes several methods are adopted, yet they are all practically the same, the object being to protect them against freezing, whether buried in pits or stored in cellars. The first consideration is to keep them in perfect darkness; the next is the bins should not be too deep—not over three feet—to produce warmth and cause them to sprout. When stored in the field, straight trenches are dug, say twenty feet in length, and four or five wide, which are filled to the depth of three feet with potatoes, then well covered with straw, on top of which put eighteen or twenty inches of earth In a pit twenty feet long there should be about three gas escapes or ventillating openings, which should be plugged with straw and covered with a board set at an angle to turn the rain. If in cellars, barn or otherwise, the bins should be covered with rugs, old carpetings or straw. Those intended to be kept for late spring sales should be frequently examined and all sprouts removed; for as soon as a potato begins to sprout it loses its solidity, dryness and quality.

Keeping Winter Squashes, &c. &c.

Keeping squashes in winter seems to be attended with considerable difficulty. They cannot be kept where it is damp, as in most cellars, or where frost can reach them, nor will they keep so well where it is so very warm. The best consition for keeping them seems to be where the air is cool and dry, yet free from frost. An attic until winter, then a closet near the chimney where the frost cannot reach, or the temperature does not rise very high, is the best most familier can command. Extensive market gardeners often keep them in houses built for the purposei where they can maintain an even temperature by the aid of fires and ventilation.

Great care should be taken to save seed only from perfect specimens that are up to the standard requirements of their kind, and as much superior as possible. When two or more kinds are planted near together the seed should not be saved, as the product will only be mongrels, owing to the readiness with which they mix. But it is better to plant each variety by itself; and to save your own seed, for the squash can be wonderfully improved by good cultivation and the careful selection of seed. I do not believe in changing seed for the sake of a change. I have same varieties of squashes the seed of which I would not exchange with anyone, and I take great care keep them pure. The seed of a squash should not be saved unless the quality and flavor prove satisfactory at the table. When thoroughly dry the seed should be carefully marked with the name of the variety and year. The special characteristics of the specimen, if it has any, should also be marked, as extra dry, extra sweet, or very dry.

Wrecking a Public Speech.

The most complete wrecking of a public speech of which I ever heard happened in a political campaign. It this case it was not hidden rocks, nor unseen currents, nor unexpected breezes, but torpedoes placed on purpose to blow the vessel off the water. The two parties were to hold meetings in the same place on two successive nights—the Republicans the first night, the Democrats the second. The Democratic speaker was a man of large form and fine presence, with a rich voice and considerable claim to oratory. He was, however, somewhat pompous, and with very marked peculiarities of manner, which his fine form and voice made even more conspicuous. The Republican speaker was a most pitiless wit, a great mimic, and possessed of a remarkable memory. Coming the first night, he made a short speech on the issues of the campaign, and then said, "This is my speech, Colonel —— will be here to-morrow night, and I'll tell what he will say." Throwing himself in the attitude of his voice and manner, he gave them the speech he had heard him make a few nights before, and which he felt sure he would repeat there. The next night the house was crowded to its utmost. Our Democratic friend felt very much flattered at the large attendance. But the moment he stepped on to the platform a suppressed smile spread itself over the audience. At his first sentence it broadened and deepened almost into a laugh. As he proceeded, posture, tone, speech, all "followed copy" so exactly that the whole audience broke out into a fit of uncontrollable laughter. His friends tried to restore order, but it was impossible to keep their own faces straight. The audience themselves felt ashamed of their behavior, and felt a sympathy for the speaker, and after an outburst they would all hush down, and determine to listen. But every time the speaker resumed, the response broke out again and defied all restraint. The speech ran a short and troubled course, and the speaker closed by no means happy. They at once explained to him the source of the difficulty. When he learned the trick his antagonist had played on him, it is said "he went for that heathen Chinee" in a phraseology not suggested by the third commandment.—The Galaxy for November.

A Hornet's Nest for a Bustle.

A correspondent from Zionsville relates the following ludicrous incident: A rather funny incident happened at one of the recent picnics near this place. It appears that a certain young lady had the misfortune to lose her bustle. While wandering through the woods she saw an old hornet's nest and she remarked to her female companion, "what a beautiful bustle that would make," and suggested that it be used for that purpose. The suggestion was acted upon and the hornet's nest adjusted in the place that should have been ornamented with a bustle. The young lady walked off, highly elated with her new patent, but alas for human hopes, it seems that the hornets were not all away from home and not exactly understanding the state of affairs they began to investigate the matter.

Suddenly a succession of unearthly screams attested the vigor with which the hornets conducted the investigation. A young man was attracted by the screams of the young lady, and the rapid manner in which that bustle was removed would have done credit to a streak of greased lightning. The young man says that the rapidity with which a pair of striped stockings flew through the air so blended the colors that he imagined he saw all the colors of the rainbow. The young lady has come to the conclusion that the old kind of bustle is the best, and she intends to discard all new patents in that line.—Allentown Chronicle.

There has been an improvement made in those high stand-up collars. They are now made with a windows in them.

She wanted to be an angel, so she ate a quart of new harvest apples and quietly hummed, "By and by, by and by."

"Please don't shoot the cows" is a sign on a farmer's fence near Chicago, intended for city sportsmen who go out after prairie chickens.

Turkish general to Turkish colonel: "Colonel, the day after to-morrow is pay day. You will take care that to-morrow we have a warm engogement."

A German called at the house of a Murphy lady in this city the other day, to sell her some goods. "Do you drink?" said the lady. The peddler dropped his pack and remarked; "Vell, I shust lieve drink mit you as any oner mans."

"My wife tells the truth three times a day," remarked a jocose old fellow, at the same time casting a very mischievous glance at her. "Before rising in the morning she says, 'O, dear, I must get up, but I don't want to.' After breakfast she adds: 'Well, I must go to work, but I don't want to.' And she goes to bed saying, 'There, I have been fussing all day and haven't done anything."

THE TWO OATHS.—A distinguished philanthropist once built a patent kennel, with a large door for the big dog to go in by and a smaller one for the little dogs. The same forethought in construction has planned the entrance to the United States Congress; but there would appear to be no reason whatever that one broad oath should not suffice to swear in all the members by. The men to whom the "iron clad" oath would apply don't take it, and the men to whom it has no applicability do take it. Query then—What is the use of it any more than there was for a little hole for the little dog alongside of the big hole for the big dog?—Ledger.

LOCKJAW.—Lockjaw frequently occurs from the effect of running any rather blunt instrumment into the palm of the hand or sole of the foot. Accidents of this kind not unfrequently happen. There is, however, a simple and effecful remedy for all such dangerous wounds. The smoke of burning wool or woolen cloth, it is asserted, will remove the pain in twenty minutes from the worst case of inflamation arising from any external injury.

WHAT HE SIGHED FOR.—A young gentleman hearing a young lady sigh, asked her: "What do you sigh for?" She replied: "Nothing," upon which he wrote and handed her the following:

U o a o, but I o thee;
O o no o, but O o me;
O let not my o a o go,
But give o o I o U so.

And here is the solution:

You sigh for a cipher, but I sigh for thee;
O sigh for no cipher, but O sigh for me;
O let not my sigh for a cipher go,
But give sigh for sigh, for I sigh for you so.

VEGETINE

Purifies the Blood, Renovates and Invigorates the Whole System.

ITS MEDICINAL QUALITIES ARE

Alterative, Tonic, Solvent and Diuretic.

VEGETINE is made exclusively from the juices of carefully-selected barks, roots, and herbs, and so strongly concentrated that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of Scrofula, Scrofulous Humor, Tumors, Cancer, Cancerous Humor, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Syphilitic Diseases, Cancer, Faintness at the Stomach, and all diseases that arise from impure blood. Sciatica, Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Gout, and Spinal complaints, can only be effectually cured through the Blood.

For Ulcers and Eruptive Disease of the Skin, Pustules, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Scaldhead, and Ringworm, Vegetine has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

For Pains in the Back, Kidney Complaints, Dropsy, Female Weakness, Leucorrhœa, arising from internal ulceration, and uterine diseases and General Debility, Vegetine acts directly upon the cause of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cures ulceration, and regulates the bowels.

For Catarrh, Dyspepsia, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Headache, Piles, Nervousness, and General Prostration of the Nervous system, no medicine has ever given such perfect satisfaction as the Vegetine. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by Vegetine have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, Vegetine is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable Blood Purifier yet placed before the public.

THE BEST EVIDENCE

The following letter from Rev. F. S. Best, Pastor of M. E. Church, Natick, Mass., will be read with interest by many physicians; also those suffering from the same disease as afflicted the son of the Rev. F. S. Best. No person can doubt this testimony as there is no doubt about the curative powers of Vegetine.

NATICK, MASS., Jan. 1, 1874.

MR. H. R. STEVENS,

Dear Sir,—We have good reason for regarding your Vegetine a medicine of the greatest value. We feel assured that it has been the means of saving our son's life. He is now seventeen years of age. For the last two years he has suffered from necrosis of his leg, caused by scrofulous affection, and was so far reduced that nearly all were saw him thought his recovery impossible. A council of the physicians could give us but the faintest hope of his ever rallying; two of the number declaring that he was beyond the reach of human remedies, that even amputation could not save him, as he had not vigor enough to endure the operation. Just then we commenced giving him Vegetine, and from that time to the present he has been continuously improving. He has lately resumed his studies, thrown away his crutches and cane, and walks about cheerfully and strong.

Though there is still some discharge from the opening where the limb was lanced, we have the fullest confidence that in a little time he will be perfectly cured.

He has taken about three dozen bottles of Vegetine, but lately uses but little, as he declares that he is too well to be taking medicine.

Respectfully yours,
E. S. BEST,
Mrs. L. C. P. Best.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets

SIZE OF PELLETS.

Or Sugar-Coated, Concentrated, Root and Herbal Juice, Anti-Bilious Granules. THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC, or Multum in Parvo Physic.

The novelty of modern Medical, Chemical, and Pharmaceutical Science. No use of any longer taking the large, repulsive, and nauseous pills, composed of cheap, crude, and bulky ingredients, when we can, by a careful application of chemical science, extract all the cathartic and other medicinal properties from the most valuable roots and herbs, and concentrate them into a minute granule, scarcely larger than a mustard seed, that can be gently swallowed by those of the most sensitive stomachs and fastidious tastes. Each little Purgative Pellet represents, in a most concentrated form, as much cathartic power as is embodied in any of the large pills found for sale in drug-shops. From their wonderful cathartic power, in comparison to their size, people who have not tried them are apt to suppose that they are harsh or drastic in effect; but such is not at all the case, the different active medicinal principles of which they are composed being so harmonized and modified, one by the others, as to produce a most searching and thorough, yet gently and kindly operating, cathartic.

$500 Reward is hereby offered by the proprietor of these Pellets, to any chemist who, upon analysis, will find in them any mineral or other forms of mercury, mineral poison, or injurious drug.

Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using them. They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For Jaundice, Headache, Constipation, Impure Blood, Pain in the Shoulders, Fickleness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations from the Stomach, Bad taste in the mouth, Bilious attacks, Pain in region of Kidneys, Internal Fever, Bloated feeling about Stomach, Rush of Blood to Head, High-colored Urine, Unsettled Feeling, Gloomy Forebodings, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Purgative Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, I wish to say that their action upon the animal economy is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative impress. Age does not impair the properties of these Pellets. They are sugar-coated and inclosed in glass bottles, their virtues being thereby preserved unimpaired for any length of time, in any climate, so that they are always fresh and reliable. This is not the case with those pills which are put up in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes. Recollect that for all diseases where a Laxative, Alterative, or Purgative, is indicated, these little Pellets will give the most perfect satisfaction to all who use them.

They are sold by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle.

WOMAN.

Of an immense practice, extending through a period of years, having within that time treated many thousand cases of those diseases peculiar to Woman, I have been enabled to perfect a safe, sure and agreeable medicine that meets the indications presented by that class of diseases with positive certainty and exactness.

To designate this natural specific compound, I have named it

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

The term, however, is but a feeble expression of my high appreciation of its value, based upon my own personal observation. As a close observer, I have, while witnessing its positive results in the few special diseases incident to the separate organism of woman, singled it out as the climax or crowning gem of my medical career. On its merits, as a positive, safe, and effectual remedy for this class of diseases, and one that will, at all times and under all circumstances, act kindly and in harmony with the laws which govern the female system, I am willing to stake my reputation as a physician. Nay, even more, so confident am I that it will not disappoint the most sanguine expectations of a single invalid lady who uses it for any of the ailments for which I recommend it, that I offer and sell it under A POSITIVE GUARANTEE. If a beneficial effect is not experienced by the time two-thirds of the contents of the bottle are used, I will, on return of the bottle, two-thirds of the medicine having been taken according to directions, and the case being one for which I recommend it, promptly refund the money paid for it. Had I not the most perfect confidence in its virtues, I could not offer it as I do under these conditions; but, having witnessed its truly miraculous cures in thousands of cases, I feel warranted and perfectly safe in risking both my reputation and my money on its merits.

The following are among those diseases in which my Favorite Prescription has worked cures, as if by magic, and with a certainty never before attained by any medicine: Leucorrhœa, Excessive Flowing, Painful Monthly Periods, Suppressions when from unnatural causes, Irregularities, Weak Backs, Prolapsus, or falling of the Uterus, Anteversion and Retroversion, Bearing Down Sensations, Internal Heat, Nervous Prostration, Debility, Dependency, Threatened Miscarriage, Chronic Congestion, Inflammation and Ulceration of the Uterus, Impotency, Barrenness, or Sterility, Female Weakness, and very many other chronic diseases incident to woman not mentioned here. In all affections of this nature, my Favorite Prescription works cures—the quarrel of the world. The medicine I do not extol as a cureall, but it admirably fulfills a singleness of purpose, being a most perfect specific in all chronic diseases of the sexual system of woman. It will not disappoint, nor will it do harm, in any state or condition.

Those who desire further information on these subjects can obtain it in THE PEOPLE'S COMMON SENSE MEDICAL ADVISER, a book of over 900 pages, sent, post-paid, on receipt of $1.50. It treats minutely of those diseases peculiar to Females, and gives much valuable advice in regard to the management of those affections.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY.

A CASE OF CONSUMPTION.

EAST STONEHAM, Oxford County, Me., May 1, 1878.

MESSRS. SETH W. FOWLE & SONS:

Gentlemen.—I feel it my duty to write a few words in favor of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. In the early part of last winter I took a severe cold, and shortly after a deep seating cough was added to it. My friends did everything they could for me, but without avail. The best physicians that could be procured did not relieve me, and my cough continued all through the winter with increasing severity. I spit blood three or four times a day, and my friends considered my case hopeless, gave me up as a Confirmed Consumptive. I was in this condition when I heard of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. I began its use, and before I had taken half a bottle of it my cough and all other troubles left me and I was cured. I feel so truly indebted to this great remedy for what it has done for me that I send you this voluntary testimony, hoping it may be the means of inducing others who are suffering as I was, to make use of it. It is the best remedy for lung complaints that I have ever heard of, and I am constantly recommending it to my friends.

Yours with respect,

MRS. MELISSA M. HALL.

THE INTERNATIONAL REVIEW.

The "International" for 1878 will present the usual number of articles upon religious, scientific, political and social subjects most engaging the public attention. It will devote space to European matters so far as they are likely to be interesting to Americans. It will continue to introduce the most popular foreign writers to readers for favor with the best American writers. It will also be able, strong, and practical, as well as popular, in the character and style of its presentations. It is safe to say that no other magazine in the world can supply its place in the libraries of Americans who love to consider the progress of events throughout the world, and to know their bearing upon the interests of the United States. Professors Curtius, Helfferdorf, Vogel, Dr. Dollinger, Dr. Berner, Dr. Neumeyer, Dr. Carl Abel, Mr. Julius Rubel, Prince Poniatowski, M. Joseph Jacquemyns, M. Spuller, Hon. M. Cisneros, Mr. Hamerton, Mr. Freeman, Rev. Dr. James H. Rigg, Thomas Brassey, M. P., Gibernatis, Madame Villari, Dora D'Istria, Pezzetti, M. Wedell, Dr. Padovani, Prince Poniatowski, Judge Cooley, Dr. Thorsten, Wm. C. Bryant, Hon. Palmer, Carl Schurz, General Sigel, Dr. O. Good, Hon. Delmar, Wendell, Dr. Depew, Eugene Schuyler, Bayard Taylor, E. P. Whipple, and others may be named as special contributors.

Thus is organized as powerful an organ of thought and reform-ideas, as can be easily conceived, and it presents itself for popular support during 1877. It is not known that there is any reason why copies of the "Review" should not be found in every household. It has already the largest circulation of any secular Review, because of the popular attractions. These attractions will be developed gradually, and increased as their need is made known.
